REPORT OF THE MASSACHUSETTS GENERAL HOSPITAL TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES

GIVEN AT GRADUATION, JANUARY 5, 1922

JUST before Thanksgiving, Miss Parsons returned to us to begin the writing of the history of the Training School. The reports of every year have been out for review. Some periods have been adjudged as important, and others are less so.

It is almost certain that the vantage point of retrospect has changed the relative importance of these records, and in all probability our verdict is quite different from the verdict of those men and women who lived those years as current years.

Therefore, while we of today do not look at the year 1921 as being an especially eventful one in the life of the School, perhaps an historian looking back will adjudge it otherwise.

It is not at all our intent to apologize for having taken no revolutionary steps. No one is quite sure just how radical the next step for training schools should be. Practically every person who is in any way responsible for a training school is still awaiting the report of the Rockefeller Foundation Committee on Nursing.

Thanks to my predecessors, the progress of this School has been such that we could afford to use this waiting time to take account of our own stock — to repair and replenish, to rearrange and readjust, and, when we saw fit, to condemn and discard.

Will those of us who were in Service ever forget taking stock, and counting property? I think not. When we came home we had greater respect for the property of our civilian hospitals. Perhaps that is the reason why one of the biggest pieces of work done by the Training School this year has been the creating of a standard ward equipment, actually getting that equipment on the wards, and, by weekly and monthly inventories, making a very good showing at keeping it there. When it is realized how dissimilar are our wards, and how full is the time of the persons working in our wards and store-rooms, one gains some conception of what an undertaking it has been.

Stock-taking has also been done in quite a different quarter.

For various reasons our lecturers have changed somewhat during the last three or four years. Overlapping is bound to creep in, and lecturers everywhere will give too many hours to his or her speciality unless somebody calls "Time." Consequently we have clipped a few wings, and have put into the general surgical or medical course subjects that have outgrown their place in the "special" group. By this rearranging, it has been possible to increase the teaching in pediatrics, in dermatology, and in orthopædic nursing.

We have made out an hour-by-hour outline of the major courses of the theoretical instruction. By the time this school year is ended we intend to have completed an hour-by-hour outline of every subject taught in the thirty-nine point theoretical course of this School. For obvious reasons we cannot send out these outlines, but any person interested in training school work is welcome to come to the office to study them, and to offer constructive criticism.

The fact that the patient in the public health nursing field is so often a child, has made us even more anxious than formerly to broaden out our practical experience in the care of sick children. This we have been able to do by using a helper in the Out-Patient Children's Department; thus relieving the nurse of some of the routine, and enabling her to get more nursing experience. In the public health field, a nurse also finds knowledge of contagious diseases extremely useful. Such experience is not obtainable in this hospital. Therefore, we are especially grateful to Dr. Place for coming here to lecture, and to both Dr. Place and to the Boston City Hospital for the clinics which have been given in the South Department for our nurses.

A greater attempt is being made to put into schools of nursing those features that long have been considered helpful to other schools. For many years faculty meetings have been found valuable to other schools, and it seemed logical to suppose that a faculty meeting would be profitable to us. Therefore, early in December, we invited every person who teaches in the School, and the visiting men who give the final examinations, to attend such a meeting. There are about thirty-five persons teaching. Twenty-four attended this meeting, and the hour was a profitable one.

Every year sees many changes among the heads of departments, and among the head nurses. This year has been no exception. Four of those who have resigned have been married, one has gone abroad, and one to the West; others have taken positions of greater responsibility, and others have gone into different forms of nursing.

The physical changes of the year have been few; to many, they might seem to be minor, but to us, they are of major importance. In the early part of the year, the ladies of the Advisory Committee refurnished the sitting-room and the tea room of the Thayer. From the small room adjoining the theoretical classroom in the New Home has been evolved an admirable office for the theoretical instructor. The book cases that were in that room have been moved out into the larger room. Perhaps getting them out into the stronger light had some influence on the choice which this class made in its gift to the School, namely, a set of book cases for the reference library.

Years ago, we, as student nurses, were supposed, by some miraculous means, to drop all our social interests when we came to train. Actually we dropped the social activities, but not the social interests. I am thankful to say that we have grown more sane in our ideas about recreation in training schools.

This year has again seen a welcoming party to every section of the entering class; there have been several dances, a circus, and this year the students have discovered that the Out-Patient upper amphitheatre was very well adapted to giving the "Follies of 1923." Then there was the Christmas party, and a sub-committee of the Ladies' Advisory Committee to the Training School gave a series of musicales. The attendance was proof that they were enjoyed. I can never refrain from recording the very real joy which the students bring to the patients and to the members of the resident hospital family every Christmas morning by their singing of Christmas carols. It is this doing something for somebody else that helps many a young woman over her Christmas away from home.

It is not infrequent to hear it said that from the standpoint of health, a nurse's training is such hazardous work that the opportunities for infection are many, and that because of hard work resistance is lowered. At the instigation of one of our Visiting Men, the 1920 records of illness were gone over. It was found that the average number of days' illness per student per year was seven, and including subsequent leaves, which it is our policy to make generous, it was sixteen. When it is known that the average number of days of illness per year per persons in industry ranges from six to nine, our seven is not a poor showing. This year the use of the Schick test, and subsequent immunizing when necessary, has been added to the other prophylactic measures.

The five-year course in affiliation with The School of Public Health Nursing is now well established. The first student is in her last year, and is a member of tonight's graduation class. When her course is completed she will be given the degree of B. S. from Simmons College, the diploma of this School, and, upon state registration, a certificate in public health nursing. Another student is in her fourth year; four entered this School in September, and two more will enter next week. This gives a total of eight who have reached the hospital training part of their course.

The first formal report of this School was printed in 1879. It is really a classic. In it one reads, "We are sometimes asked, 'How many first-class nurses can you turn out?' for which our answer may fairly be, 'As many as you will send us of first-class women.'"

With this same thought in mind in 1921, we sent out a letter to many of the Training School Alumnae, and to many of the House Officer Alumni. In this letter we stated the growing needs of the Hospital, and the growing needs of the School, and asked these members of our hospital family to recommend first-class young women to the school. The response probably played no small part in making our fall class of fifty-six the largest that has ever entered the School. The total number entering during the year 1921 was ninety-nine: only twice has the number been larger.

The great nursing interests of the hour seem to be in the public health field. We are glad to give that great work some of our best graduates, and promising pupils. We cannot forget, however, that the source of all graduate nurses is the training school, and so we also rejoice when some of our competent young women elect to teach in nursing schools. From present indications, it looks as though several of this class would do this work. The public health people tell us we must not overwork our executives and instructors if we expect to compete with their field. Time has brought relief to the heads of many nursing schools. It has been found wise to relieve them of much of the detail, that they may have vision, courage, and enthusiasm for the guiding of policies, and for the stimulation of growth. Just now it is of the instructors that we are asking almost the impossible as to the number of subjects taught, the number of hours taught, and the amount of written work corrected. We have offended in this direction, but we are mending our ways. Within a few weeks, when one of the members of this class finishes her training, this young woman will be full time graduate assistant to our theoretical instructor.

There are two very pleasant factors in this appointment: the relief that it brings to a heavily burdened person, and having one of our own young graduates interested in, and qualified for this work.

Although those of us whose first interest is in training schools are perhaps a bit jealous of the public health appeal to our young women, we realize that to many young women it is a challenge for real service. We would fail to assume our full responsibilities if we did not do everything in our power to help along the field of public health nursing, and so, although the demands on the School are increasing from every direction, on February first we shall increase the number of affiliations with The School of Public Health Nursing from two to three, sending a total of nine students each year.

On graduation night we always think of the alumnæ scattered over the length and breadth of the land. We know that they are thinking of this Hospital tonight, and we know how much they would enjoy being here tonight.

A very noticeable feature of this past year has been the alumnæ's reaching out into an ever-extending territory. The number in the Middle West has increased tremendously. In California alone there are about fifty of our graduates, — several are married, and the others are engaged in nearly every known form of nursing work. This year Miss Barton, and Miss May have gone out to China, and Miss Geis to India. We have long had representatives in China, Turkey, Greece, Poland, Albania, and Africa. Tonight there is in this audience an alumna on furlough from her work in Ceylon.

Of our missionary group is Miss Dieter, the author of the words to the "Song to the M. G. H." How we wish it were possible for Miss Dieter, away over there in China, to hear her younger sisters singing, for the first time tonight, her tribute to her Alma Mater.

The alumnæ is continually working on the Endowment Fund. Fourteen thousand dollars seems a very modest sum in comparison to the seven-figure endowments about which we read, but it must be remembered that practically all of this has been earned by bazaars, or has been given by nurses themselves, — women earning their own living, often with others dependent upon them, or perhaps they themselves getting on where they must think of the years when their own earning capacity will lessen. Added to this is the fact that every worthy graduate of this School gave to the hospital in her training days generous return for what she received. Therefore, this sum represents a faith and a loyalty that cannot be measured in dollars and cents, for such faith and such loyalty are priceless.

During the past months, by spoken word and by written word, we have paid tribute to that noble woman whom we have lost — Miss Dolliver. Somehow it seems as though of all places that the most fitting place in which to pay tribute to Miss Dolliver is in this room, the center of this institution; and of all occasions the most fitting occasion is that of graduation.

For thirty-two years Miss Dolliver reflected glory and honor upon this hospital and upon this School. For about fourteen years she held our banner high in the neighboring State of New York, doing various forms of administrative work in hospitals, doing private nursing, and organizing and taking charge of the Central Directory for Nurses in New York City.

We, of course, think of Miss Dolliver, first as superintendent of this school, and then as superintendent of the Phillips House. It is so easy to forget that the School did not always possess those features which we have long considered our essential basis. Miss Dolliver's ten years in charge of the School were filled with achievements. She introduced experience in obstetrics, pediatrics, and operating-room work, and arranged an affiliation for the care of private patients, and another for district nursing. It was she who started bedside clinics, held the first graduation exercises, and made a beginning at having something in the way of social activities. The installation of The Simmons College Preparatory Course, and of an instructor for teaching practical nursing procedures, were two outstanding important features of her work.

When we think of Miss Dolliver, the woman, not in her official capacity only, of what do we think: — of a woman distinguished in appearance, possessing dignity, poise, and a charm of manner; of a woman loving the higher and finer things of life; of a woman devoted to and possessing a coterie of friends; of a woman doing her full duty as she saw it, and expecting others to live by the same standards; of a woman of keen intellect, who measured accurately the true worth of her pupils and of her co-workers; in a word, of a woman who was "sterling" in her personal qualities and in her relations with life.

In the Hospital annals of 1921 will also be recorded the Centennial. As far as the School is concerned, perhaps it is not an especial milestone, but the School and the Hospital are so inter-related that an event for one is an event for the other. Those of us of this generation are fortunate to have had the privilege of feeling the thrill of the review of this institution's century of service. But with all great privileges there are great responsibilities.

We, today's children of the Massachusetts General Hospital, having received the inspiration of her traditions, the blessing of her integrity, and the fruit of her progress, it is incumbent upon us to pass these things on to succeeding generations.

May we be given the vision and the power to keep these traditions sacred, this integrity inviolate, and the march onward and upward.

THE REPORT OF THE TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES' GRADUATION

JANUARY 4, 1923.

A year seems but as a day to those of us who are engaged in the interesting and absorbing work of caring for the hundreds of sick persons who pass through the various departments of this great hospital. Therefore, it is difficult to realize that graduation season is again here, and that now, every few days, a member of this class of 1923 will finish her years of preparation, and will step out into the world to take up her personal responsibility in the work of prevention, or of care of illness.

It is then that this school is put to the "acid test," for these young women will learn just how adequately they have been prepared to meet the demands made upon them. It is well, therefore, that once a year, at graduation, the custom is to list the year's accomplishments. There is no doubt but that the expectancy of this day of reckoning is a stimulus to endeavor.

It is a satisfaction to record that, in 1922, a task begun in 1921 has been finished, namely, the class outline of the various courses in theory. For many years the office records have shown the ward experience of every pupil and the number of hours of anatomy, bacteriology, medical nursing, etc., but not until this year could the subject-matter of these class periods be shown.

At the last graduation the report showed that the theoretical course in Pediatrics had been strengthened. During the past year it has been possible to lengthen the period of practical work in Pediatrics.

The outgoing affiliations have remained unchanged while the incoming affiliations have changed considerably. The Choate Memorial Hospital has transferred its students to a school where Pediatrics could be obtained; the Children's Hospital has transferred its students to the school of the neighboring hospital, the Peter Bent Brigham. During certain months of the year the number of students coming from the New England Baptist Hospital and from the Faulkner Hospital has been increased. The present group of McLean students is here for eight months instead of six, and these months during the school year. These changes have simplified our affiliation problems, as the McLean students are now here long enough to get the work of the school year. The need of students coming from all other affiliating schools is the same. For the students coming from these five smaller general hospitals there has been created an independent course of thirty hours, consisting of lectures, bedside clinics, and quizzes, the major subject being medical nursing. The establishment of this course is a real accomplishment.

For many years this school has had the reputation of being a hard school. Those of us who are her graduates well know why. The reasons are also potent to those who know the construction of the hospital, the development of the hospital, and the development of the school. Some of the very things that have made the school hard have developed endurance and resourcefulness in the graduates; for instance, the plan of the serving rooms in the Bulfinch, and the transfer system. One look at the great corridors tells of long distances to be traveled. The discerning know that the work waits for the traveler's return.

To meet the community's demand for more broadly trained nurses, one thing after another has been added to the pupil's curriculum, and to her practical experience. This broadening has often had to be done by affiliation, which meant more work for those left at home. The years have brought a variety of time-consuming methods of treatment for patients, undreamed of twenty years ago, which also has added to the work.

Those responsible for the school know that to curtail the content of the nursing course would mean suicide to the school, for in the Massachusetts General Hospital there are no frills. The medical staff could not return to antiquated methods of treatment. Therefore, early last Spring it became evident that some readjustment must be made, because the nursing personnel could no longer meet the increasing demands of this two-way development, — the advancement of the hospital, and the advancement of the school.

The report of the Rockefeller Committee on Nursing Education laid great stress on a fact already well known, but to which far too little attention had been given, namely, that the maximum nursing power of the student body in a hospital is not obtained for the patients, because that power is diverted to work that could be done by persons other than nurses.

The most logical relief at the Massachusetts General Hospital was to provide other persons to do some of the traveling of the great corridors, to care for flowers, to stack linen, set and clear innumerable trays, etc. This would cost money, of course, but, unless it were done, the patients would lack adequate nursing care. Therefore, an effort to assure patients of more adequate nursing care became the deciding factor in bringing about the authorization, in May, of the employment of nine ward helpers. The results are three. The pupils have more time with the patients, and hence more time for present day treatments; further development of the school is possible; and, by no means an unimportant result, the reputation of this school, as a very hard school, is somewhat mitigated.

Last year the statistics on illness showed the average number of days of illness per student, per year, to be seven. A medical man who reviewed these statistics said that a reduction should be made in the number of days lost on account of septic fingers, and that with the demonstrated value of the Schick test, a reduction should be made in the number of days lost from diphtheria. During this last year there has been only one serious septic finger. Barring the time lost from this one case, the time loss from septic fingers has been reduced 60%. All students have had the Schick test, followed by immunization, when necessary, so that there has been no diphtheria in the School this past year.

The value of bodily mechanics in promoting health has been demonstrated. This work is frequently referred to as "posture." In order to teach the students how to use their own bodies to better advantage as well as to teach them how to bring more relief to their patients' bodies, a short course in the essentials of bodily mechanics has been authorized.

The physical changes in the hospital this year have, in the main, affected the school only indirectly. A minor change, but of major importance to the student body, has been the installment of signal lights in Wards E and D. These have replaced the red disks which were beside the doors of the rooms. Perhaps the physical change in which the alumnæ will be most interested is that of transferring the orthopædic operating room from Ward I to the surgical amphitheatre. The orthopædic operating room now occupies what was formerly Dr. Hartwell's laboratory.

During the year a new surgical service has been created for teaching and research. This is known as the "Third Surgical Service." Consequently there are two additional teams operating in the amphitheatre. If you think the surgical amphitheatre was a busy place in your time, which time may have been before the reorganization of the surgical services, come and visit that amphitheatre now any morning between eleven and one.

Just here is the place to mention the generous and really valuable assistance given to this hospital by the Surgical Dressings Committee, a committee composed of women who had made dressings during the time of war, and who wished to contribute something to the care of the sick in the time of peace. Not only have the members worked at the hospital, but many have taken the work to their homes. This committee has made, during the last year, over ninety-six thousand dressings for this hospital.

But what of that side of the school life which is not work, but recreation? In all schools of nursing the recreation side is far too little developed; not because of lack of interest in its development on the part of the faculty and students, but because of the lack of a person to direct the recreation, the irregularity of off-duty hours, and the changing of affiliations, all of which make organized social activities difficult.

The Massachusetts General Hospital school is fortunate in possessing the first essential to social activities, namely, an adequate place for assembly. No school has a room better adapted to this purpose than that beautiful great room in the new home. Members of the school and of the alumnæ never cease to rejoice in the contribution which that room makes to this school. It is there that social life centers, the informal social interchange of every evening, the welcoming parties to the new students, the dances, the holiday festivities, and the musicales given by the ladies of the Advisory Committee. This is the second season that this committee, with the ladies of the Hospital Visiting Committee, has given Thursday teas in the nurses' homes. These teas are enjoyable and helpful because they afford an opportunity for acquaintance, which opportunity could never be had by a casual visit on the busy ward.

Frequently the question is asked, "What do these young women who go out from this school year after year find to do?" It is, therefore, interesting to know what the young women are doing who have left the school during the past year. Of fifty-five engaged in active nursing work, thirteen are in private duty, twelve are head nurses, nine are in public health, seven in operating rooms, seven are instructors, five are supervisors, and two are anæsthetists.

The demand for instructors in nursing far exceeds the supply. This school is, therefore, justified in rejoicing over the contribution of seven instructors in one year.

In tonight's graduation class are four young women from European countries, all of whom will return to do the work of nursing organization in their own lands. One will return to France, one to Czecho-Slovakia, and two to Poland. It has been a privilege and a pleasure to have these students, and we know, from their standard of work here, that they will reflect credit upon this school when they take up their responsibilities at home.

One of the greatest pleasures of graduation night is the return of scores of alumnæ, and the memories of pleasant associations with hundreds of others who cannot return. Practically every one of them would rather be here tonight than to be in any other place on the face of the earth. Now, that is an extravagant statement. What foundation is there for making it? Individuals love and are loyal to that for which they have worked and sacrificed. Therein lies the reason for the loyalty of the graduates of this school. They have not only worked and sacrificed as pupils to help this hospital do its great work, but they have worked and sacrificed for the same cause ever since they graduated.

During the past year there have been two outstanding examples of devotion to the school. First, the efforts which the alumnæ have made toward the endowment fund, and second, the financing of the publication of the History of the Training School, written by Miss Parsons. This last has been the main enterprise of the alumnæ during the year. The graduates themselves contributed 70% of the necessary funds, the remainder being, in the main, a gift from a very generous member of the hospital organization. The proceeds of the sale of this book will go to the endowment fund. The book is, of course, interesting to the friends of this school, but it is also interesting to others because it is the history of the development of nursing, the Massachusetts General Hospital being one of the oldest schools in this country.

Among the factors which contribute toward keeping alive the graduates' interest in the school are the reunions held from time to time in various parts of the country. This year there have been such reunions in Washington, California, New York, and Connecticut. During the last few years there have been two great reunions here at the hospital. The greatest of all reunions is scheduled for this year. During the Autumn of this year, 1923, the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of this school will be fittingly commemorated.

To this greatest of all our reunions we shall welcome a very large per cent of our fifteen hundred graduates. Here we shall rejoice over our successes, and ponder over our failures. With the experiences of fifty years of successes and failures as a background, and with no small conception of the future needs of the sick in the community as a challenge, we shall take counsel one from another as to just how the Massachusetts General Hospital Training School for Nurses can, during the coming years, still better serve the sick of the world.

SALLY JOHNSON,
Superintendent of the Training School.

NOTE: This book will be published biennially and not annually.
